The feature picture at the Pavilion to-day, entitled, "The Man and the Girl," enables us to see in moving pictures a little person who visited Barre a short time ago. It is little Victoria Marlow, who was here with her parents, Suntoro & Marlow, a vaudeville act that played at the Pavilion. While little Victoria was in Barre her bright, vivacious ways made her the pet of all who met her, she being a very cute little miss of seven years, with many old-fashioned whims. She is easily recognized in the picture, as the same little old-fashioned whimsical miss.

Thirty of the friends of Miss Helen Brown gave her a "variety shower" at her home on Jefferson street last evening, in honor of her approaching marriage. After being showered with numerous bundles Miss Brown was ushered into the parlor and surrounded by her friends, after which she was called on to read the verses written for the occasion and contained in each bundle. They proved very amusing and had many "hits." Her future was prophesied in verse by Miss Martin and Miss Dooney, who were disguised as gypsies. During the evening cards were passed around, and each guest was requested to write a wish for Miss Brown's future happiness. After refreshments of ice cream and cake had been served, the remainder of the evening was spent in singing and talking over past times.
